Concept Question 10-13: Why does the wavelet transform sparsify real-world signals and images?

Because many real-world signals are piecewise-polynomial, as defined in Eq. (10.122), and the Daubechies wavelet transform of a piecewise-polynomial signal is mostly zero-valued (sparse), as derived in Section 10-12. Analogous comments apply to images.