Concept Question 6-14: Why is it more practical to design a lowpass filter on the basis of poles rather than zeros?

Because the form of the impulse response $h(t)$ using poles is a sum of exponential functions, which allows more flexibility of $h(t)$.